The Look of the Emmys

BY JENNIFER FERRISE &
SAMANTHA SIMON

Westworld star and outstanding supporting actress award winner Thandie Newton seriously popped in this bubblegum pink creation by Brandon Maxwell, which was just debuted at the designer's spring show. "She exuded confidence, grace, and powerful goddess vibes," says stylist Erin Walsh. "The second it was on her body, we were like, hot damn. We knew it was the one."

BRIGHT Idea

How do you pull off this season's highlighter hues? Keep the silhouette streamlined, and add a sweeping skirt or sash for good measure.

THAT'S SO FIRE

Smoky eyes took a back seat to the red-orange eye-shadow trend, which ranged from bold apricot shades to more subtle swipes of crimson.

TWINKLE, TWINKLE A statue may have been the most coveted accessory of the night, but these stunning jewels were in a category all their own.

Queer Eye Takes On Hollywood

As presenters, the Emmy-winning Fab Five had a bird's-eye view of the night's best looks. Here's who won over TV's resident style pros with their glam.

"The rest of the boys and I were in awe of Jessica Biel. Her dress was gorgeous, and then she added a lip and walked out the door looking like a goddess. JT is a lucky man!"

—BOBBY BERK

In Ralph & Russo Couture, with husband Justin Timberlake

"The hair? Flawless. The dresses? Regal AF. The Broad City girls Ilana Glazer and Abbi Jacobson were so on point, I couldn't decide if I wanted to curtsy or belt out a 'Yas, Queens!'"

—JONATHAN VAN NESS

"My favorite look of the night was hands down Millie Bobby Brown. Her dress was simple—classic but so youthful. It was a perfect fit all around."
